PORTLAND BEER OREGON

Wayfinder Beer

Wayfinder is a new brewery project in Portland, Oregon. The team transformed 12,000 square feet of the Urban Row Building in Portland's Central Eastside into a classic destination for beer and food lovers.

Wayfinder is the brainchild of Charlie Devereux (co-founder of Double Mountain Brewery), Matthew Jacobson (co-founder/owner of Sizzle Pie, Quality Bar, and Relapse Records) and Rodney Muirhead (co-founder/owner of Podnah's Pit and La Taq). Their mission: to bring simple and authentic pleasures of the highest quality to the Rose City and beyond.

Guests to Wayfinder love the 110-seat tap hall, and when the weather permits, flock outside to the massive patio. The menu of handcrafted comfort food features deliciousness from a custom wood-fired grill. Wayfinder will use a four-vessel, 10-barrel brewhouse to create world-class lagers and ales for onsite enjoyment and wholesale distribution.

Awards in six categories during Oregon Beer Awards 2021.

- New School Beer 5/20/2021

"Handsomely composed of dark wood, exposed brick, and long tables and benches, the brewery stretches out into 8,900 square feet of rehabbed warehouse space—a lot of room for people to sit, drink, eat, hang out."

- Craft Beer & Brewing 10/26/2020

"The brewery is as grand as its ambition, with a kitchen that puts out an eclectic food menu larger than what you'll find at 90 percent of the breweries in Seattle."

- Seattle Times 3/2/2017

"Portland's brand-spankin-new Wayfinder Beer is the new gold standard for local brewpub design."

- The Portland Mercury 10/18/2016
